Targeting the green economy

SYDNEY'S first group training program targeting the growing "green economy" has been launched.

The WPC Group GreenSkills program will create apprenticeship and traineeship opportunities for emerging green collar jobs, needed as businesses, governments and households respond to the need to minimise carbon pollution, adapt to water scarcity and repair environmental damage.

The need to build skills in these areas won't wait until after the financial crisis, and businesses providing services to meet these growing needs are training their employees now.

WPC Group, with the NSW Government, is creating opportunities to learn skilled green jobs through apprenticeships and traineeships in a partnership between business, the not-for-profit and education sectors.
